

SCHOLARS
STRATEGY NETWORK

Money in Politics Explained by Experts

JUNE 11, 2019

Dominik Doemer

On June 26 and 27th, Democratic presidential hopefuls face their first debate on a national stage. While the debates will cover a broad range of issues, money in politics is likely to be among them. As you prepare for your coverage of the debates and resulting policy discussions, the following scholars are available and prepared to comment on money in politics.

Money in Politics

ADAM BONICA

Stanford University

Expert on ideology, campaign finance and interest groups politics.

NICHOLAS CARNES

Duke University

Expert on the influence of legislators' backgrounds on economic policy and inequalities of social class.

JEN A. HEERWIG

Stony Brook University

Expert on America's campaign finance system and political inequality.

ALEXANDER W. HERTEL-FERNANDEZ

Columbia University

Expert on party politics and dark money.

JOSHUA L. KALLA

Yale University

Expert on the role of donor access and money on voter persuasion.

MICHAEL J. MALBIN

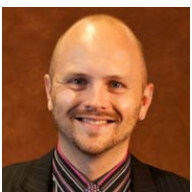

SUNY at Albany

Expert on money in politics in federal and state elections.

MICHAEL G. MILLER

Barnard College

Expert on campaign finance, election administration, and voting behavior.

STAN NGUYEN OKLOBDIJA

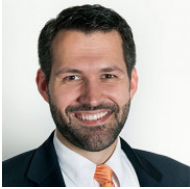

University of California-Riverside

Expert on campaign finance law and money in politics in both state and federal elections.

DOUGLAS M. SPENCER

University of Colorado Boulder

Expert on campaign finance, voting rights, and election administration cases in the courts.

CIARA TORRES-SPELLISCY

Stetson University

Expert on money in politics, strengthening election laws, and improving corporate governance.

CHRISTOPHER WITKO

University of California-Davis

Expert on interest group influence in the policy process, money in politics, and the politics of income inequality.