

Colorado Proposition 115: Explained by an Expert

OCTOBER 2, 2020

The 2020 election is quickly approaching, and in some cases voters have already cast their ballots. Not only are voters selecting their preferred candidates, but many are also weighing in on ballot initiatives with important implications for public policy.

For reporters covering the debate around Colorado Proposition 115, regarding a proposed ban on abortion after 22 weeks, the following expert is available to provide commentary and analysis:

KATE COLEMAN-MINAHAN

University of Colorado Anschutz Medical Campus

Coleman-Minahan's research focuses on reproductive health disparities among marginalized women, particularly adolescents and immigrants.

"Research shows that abortion bans like Proposition 115 harm families and children. Denying people a wanted abortion negatively impacts their mental and physical health and reduces their families' economic security."