With the midterms around the corner, Scholars Strategy Network has a university-based expert who is available to offer political commentary and analysis on Arizona's election.

KENICIA WRIGHT

Arizona State University, Tempe

Wright's work addresses broad questions related to socially and economically marginalized groups in the US, including the factors that promote representation of members of traditionally under-represented groups, such as racial/ethnic minorities and women. Her current research focuses on the emergence and electoral success of candidates from traditionally under-represented groups as well as the opinions and political behavior of people who belong to these groups.
